Guilt-free treats

Easter decadence comes in euphoric forms this year

If, like me, you're looking for a guilt-free way to spend the Easter long weekend this year, then it's time to look outside the coloured foil.

While Easter eggs are delicious bite-sized morsels that melt in your mouth and make you believe that Heaven is truly a place on Earth, they also go straight to your hips and thighs and the euphoria is short-lived.

Retailers like Dusk have recognised our association of chocolate with pleasure and have bottled the goodness in the form of an Easter bunny candle.

Sitting tall and proud, the chocolate bunny will burn for hours and is the perfect addition to your Easter dinner table.

But for true chocoholics, this will not be enough - more chocolate-inspired goodies are not only necessary but crucial.

Estee Lauder's Chocolate Decadence Collection looks as good as it sounds and includes nail polish, lipstick and eye pallet for a smokin' hot exterior.

Laura Mercier's Chocolate Truffle range of skincare is also a decadent splurge with its souffle body cream and body wash.

Once the body has been taken care of, step into the Hussy Love Struck dress in mocha for a look that is as smooth and flawless as a Red Tulip caramel-filled egg.

Add a Manzoni chocolate handbag and a chocolate-beaded bracelet and you won't feel like you're missing out on all the fun.

Slip on the cream-cropped jacket from This is Genevieve and you will be ready to hop, hop, hop down the road.
